YOUR CALLING. THE COUNTRY'S NEED.

According to the Council on Graduate Medical Education (COGME), the US is facing an imminent physician shortage, specifically in primary care. Ross University School of Medicine (RUSM) is helping to meet this need by training physicians who are entering nearly every area of medicine, including the critical demand in pediatrics, internal medicine and family medicine.

- RUSM provides clinical rotations at affiliated teaching hospitals in the US.
- RUSM graduates have attained more US residencies annually than those of any other medical school in the world over the last five years.
- RUSM is eligible to participate in the US Federal Direct Loan program; financial aid is available to those who qualify.

GAGA GETS PERSONAL

Little Monsters site blows up after the singer posts underwear pics in reaction to weight-gain chatter

Los Angeles Times

Lady Gaga, who has faced a week of open criticism for gaining weight, confronted detractors Tuesday the best way she knows how: by rallying her legion of fans and also revealing something personal, a battle with eating disorders.

After an Amsterdam concert displayed a fuller-figured Gaga, blogs ignited with comments and side-by-side comparisons of her shape. A radio interview saw the singer admit she'd put on more than 20 pounds, by her count.

"I'm dieting right now because I gained, like, 25 pounds," she said. "I really don't feel bad about it, not even for a second."

Still, discourse continued over her size, prompting the "Born This Way" singer to take to her social media platform Little Monsters, sharing photos of herself in her underwear and admitting body struggles from her teen years.

"Bulimia and anorexia since I was 15," she wrote on a dedicated page titled, "A Body Revolution 2013."

"But today I join the body revolution to inspire bravely," she said on a series of pictures that captured her body from various angles.

She also shared photos of her father, Joe Germanotta, of her personal assistant undergoing radiation therapy to treat breast cancer and of other fans who say the Lady inspires them to embrace physical flaws.

Katie Couric

Couric opens up

Lady Gaga isn't the only high-profile woman to admit to eating issues this week. Katie Couric opened up about her own struggles with bulimia in her college years.

"I wrestled with bulimia all through college and for two years after that. And I know this rigidity, this feeling that if you eat one thing that's wrong, you're full of self-loathing," Couric said on her talk show. LOS ANGELES TIMES

Setup: You debate this at every party. Now it's time to settle it once and for all.

Beer pong or flip cup?

Beer pong

Kate Bernot

KBERNOT@TRIBUNE.COM
@KBERNOT

VS

Flip cup

Ernest Wilkins

ERATILKINS@TRIBUNE.COM
@ERNESTWILKINS

Girls prefer flip cup, right? Wrong.

What is so appealing about warm beer dribbling down your chin or inducing a nasty case of the hiccups when you try to inhale overly carbonated keg swill in less than 4 seconds?

Drinking games aren't meant to be classy, but beer pong at least allows you to consume your beer at a human pace.

Unlike flip cup, it allows for actual (albeit drunken) conversation as well as the hilarious back-and-forth about which team's rules should govern play: Kill cups. Overtime. Rollbacks. This game has more nuance than chess. (Well, no.) The only rule that everyone needs to agree upon is this: If that ball rolls behind the radiator? Just. Leave. It. There.

Side note: I'm not even good at beer pong. I am Shaq, and beer pong shots are my free throws. Guess what? Still enjoyable. When I do hit a lucky shot, there's no more satisfying sound than the plastic "plink" of pong ball on Solo cup.

A beer pong victory is hard-fought. Flip cup is a quick sprint; beer pong is a three-hour football game in December in the frozen rain. Strategy, stamina and pure skill align for only one team.

When you and your partner finally emerge victorious, your gloating is deserved. A flip cup win lasts about three minutes, but pong glory casts a warm, golden halo over your entire night ... or maybe that's just the warm beer talking.

At parties, I look at beer pong like I look at some guy playing acoustic guitar. It's the opposite of a good time.

Tell me if this sounds familiar: Before you even start playing, there is a 15-minute debate on which variation of the rules you'll be playing, followed by several minutes of whining about how the cups aren't touching properly.

There's a big argument because someone "isn't behind the line" and no fewer than six people will walk by and comment, "You guys are STILL playing?" And there's the one guy (always a guy) who can't handle the fact that he missed and will punch a wall or scream loudly.

When I have a party, I want to get everyone together. Beer pong by default leaves people out. It's fun for only four people. (Spoiler alert: Your significant other isn't having fun watching you play.)

I've seen 30-person flip cup games. Everyone gets to rage together, the way it should be.

See someone you're crushing on but don't know that well? You can line yourself up across from her and engage in some flirty trash talk. Have beef with someone? Look him in the eye as you make a perfect flip.

Anyone who says flip cup doesn't take precision hasn't tried to make an anchor flip on a soaked table while half in the bag. Flip cup means fun, friends and slurred speech, which is the whole point of a drinking game to begin with.

Search widens for NU student

Crews follow strongest lead yet to harbor where his phone sent a signal

Maddula

Chicago Tribune

As divers searched the water at Wilmette Harbor on Wednesday, the family of a missing Northwestern student announced a $25,000 reward for information leading to the sophomore's discovery.

A team of 21 law enforcement agencies and fire departments from three counties conducted the search, and the FBI has been involved with the investigation, according to the school.

But there was little evidence to locate the 18-year-old student, Harsha Maddula. Investigators say a signal from the student's cell-phone pinged a communications tower near the harbor about 1 a.m. Saturday. He was last seen leaving an off-campus party at 12:30 a.m. Saturday. He has not been heard from since.

"This is our strongest lead at this time," said Northwestern spokesman Alan Cabbage.

None of Maddula's personal effects had been found near the harbor or in the adjoining Gillson Park, even after police used dogs to search the area.

Authorities continued to emphasize that there is no evidence of foul play and that Maddula was not considered a danger to himself.

Tanisha Patni, a freshman who lives in the same dorm as Maddula, said she spoke with

Divers search Wilmette Harbor on Wednesday for missing Northwestern University student Harsha Maddula. ABELURIBE/TRIBUNE him Friday evening—just hours before he disappeared.

"He seemed happy," Patni said. "He was joking around and laughing."

Patni said Maddula—the philanthropy chair of the dorm's executive board—was lightheartedly commenting about not having a budget, and that he needed to return to his room to plan an event Sunday.

Maddula's parents, Prasad Maddula and Dhana Lakshmi Maddula, along with the student's uncle, Sam Maddali, spoke briefly with reporters outside the U.S. Coast Guard building at Wilmette Harbor to announce a reward

HIS DESCRIPTION

Harsha Maddula is of Indian descent, about 5-foot-8-inches tall and weighs 150 pounds, with black hair, brown eyes and black-framed glasses, according to a school alert. He was last seen wearing a gray long-sleeve sweater with white and black stitching, dark gray pants and brown shoes.

while teams were diving in the water and using sonar to search for him.

They said Maddula has diabetes and might have stopped taking his medication, and they begged for people to come forward with additional information.

"If they're waiting for a reward, that's why we decided to give $25,000 to find out any information that leads to finding Harsha. Please, I want my baby back," his mother said.

The harbor is two miles north of Maddula's residence hall and 1½ miles from the location of the party where he was last seen. It's not the type of place Maddula would normally visit because he's more of an indoor person, his family said.

Frat suspended for alcohol enemas

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. Twelve students at the University of Tennessee have been cited for underage drinking, one for disorderly conduct, and a chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity has been suspended after a weekend incident involving alcohol enemas in which one student was hospitalized, a university spokeswoman said.

"Upon extensive questioning, it is believed that members of the fraternity were using rubber tubing inserted into their rectums as a conduit for alcohol as the abundance of capillaries and blood vessels present greatly heightens the level and speed of the alcohol entering the bloodstream as it bypasses the filtering by the liver," Knoxville Police Dept. spokesman Darrell DeBusk said Monday in a statement.

The student, who was taken to the UT Medical Center in critical condition with a blood alcohol level of 0.40—five times the legal cutoff for driving—has been released, the hospital said.

But the parents of the student said their son denied involvement in the activity described by the police spokesman.

Police spokesman DeBusk said he was standing by his account.

"It was information gathered through the course of our investigation," he said.

Sure, Northwestern coach Pat Fitzgerald knows the ins and outs of football, but RedEye wanted him to play a different type of game: word association. We asked Fitzgerald what word comes to mind for each Big Ten program. T.S.

PAT FITZGERALD HAS NORTHWESTERN THINKING BIG TIME

By Tracy Swartz

REDEYE

Move over, Bears. There's an undefeated football team in the Chicago area that's beating expectations—and it doesn't play at Soldier Field.

The Northwestern Wildcats are 4-0 heading into this week's game in Evanston against Indiana in the opening weekend of Big Ten play.

The Wildcats aren't just seeing success on the field, either. Since branding itself as "Chicago's Big Ten Team" two years ago with billboards around town, Northwestern has seen its season-ticket base for football jump 80 percent, senior associate athletic director Mike Polisky said. Nearly all of those new ticket holders are from the Chicago area, he said.

Polisky said some of these Northwestern newbies are not alums, but rather Chicagoans who already have a team they root for but enjoy attending college football games locally. He credited coach Pat Fitzgerald with stirring local enthusiasm.

"I would give the lion's share of the credit to what the football team has done on the field," Polisky said. "We have a long way to go still."

Fitzgerald, an Orland Park native and a celebrated linebacker for Northwestern in the mid-1990s, has been coach of the Wildcats since 2006. He is one of the youngest coaches in the Football Bowl Subdivision.

During his tenure, the Wildcats have gone 44-36 and have appeared in (and lost) four consecutive bowl games, including the 2010 Outback Bowl against Auburn.

Northwestern unsuccessfully tried to break its bowl streak last year before the Meineke Car Care Bowl by carrying around a monkey stuffed animal, symbolizing the bowl losses on the team's back. The Wildcats lost that game to Texas A&M, however, and now the monkey sits on a table in Fitzgerald's office.

Monkey business aside, Fitzgerald, 37, fielded questions about Northwestern's future, the Midwestern football scene and Chicago's role in the Wildcats' success.

TSWARTZ@TRIBUNE.COM | @TRACYSWARTZ

» For the full interview, visit redeyechicago.com.

You've got a tough stretch coming up. (Northwestern next month faces Nebraska and Iowa back-to-back, then Michigan and Michigan State in back-to-back road games.) How do you look at that stretch?

It's that way every year. It's kind of the other way around. We focus on ourselves. We look inward instead of outward and worry about what we control. And the big thing that we can control is the way we approach every day with our attitude and the way that we invest to get prepared. It's kind of been the hallmark of our success over the years. We've prepared, we've improved each week and typically playing our best football kind of when we hit this next stretch.

Do you think you can be a powerhouse like Ohio State or Michigan?

Obviously, they've got a couple hundred more wins over us. I want us to be the best we can be. I think it's a waste of your time to worry about comparing yourself to others in football and in life. We just need to aspire to be the best we can be and then the championships will take care of themselves.

Do you feel Northwestern is Chicago's Big Ten team?

I've definitely seen a change. The motto is one thing. ... Our season tickets are up exponentially, our attendance numbers are up. The buzz around town has been just electrifying. I think we're still just in the foundation stage. We're not the finished product. We're still building that brand.

How would you rate the Midwestern football scene vs. the Southern football scene?

It's an easy comparison on wins and losses. I think that aspect is very cyclical. There's been generations of time when the Midwest has been dominant and now as of lately, the [Southeastern Conference] has had a great run in national championships. You gotta tip your hat and respect that. ... But I look more at the big picture. I think college football is as strong as it's ever been.

How would you describe your fans?

I think No. 1 I would say "supportive." Our fans are incredibly loyal. They've been through a lot. Especially our longtime fans. ... We fast-forward to today. ... If you're under 40 years old, you only know Northwestern as a winner. I think we're kind of young and hip and cool.

What are some positives to being a young guy in this job?

From the standpoint of my age, I think I can relate to the guys. I was in school here when email came out, so I'm not that old. There's a lot that's changing and evolving but I think I've been a part of every step of that here on campus.

Do you think this is your last job?

I don't see myself being a [former Florida State coach Bobby] Bowden or a [deceased Penn State coach Joe] Paterno that's in their late 60s, 70s coaching. I think this is a young man's game, especially the way that I enjoy coaching. I like being active on the field. I like being involved and engaged. I don't see myself stepping away from that, and I think the minute that I do, I'm not doing my players the service that they need.

5 BIG TEN MATCHUPS TO WATCH

Wisconsin at Nebraska
Sept. 29

This could be a preview of the inaugural Big Ten championship game. You'll be seeing a lot of red in the stands, for better or worse.

Michigan State at Michigan
Oct. 20

Whoever wins this game might have the inside track on the Legends Division crown. The teams also can compare notes on losing to Notre Dame.

Nebraska at Northwestern
Oct. 20

A victory over the powerhouse Cornhuskers would go a long way toward convincing some that the Wildcats are for real—especially with all the Nebraska fans expected to show up.

Michigan at Ohio State
Nov. 24

With the Buckeyes ineligible for postseason play, they'll be looking to play spoiler to the archrival Wolverines' chances.

Illinois at Northwestern
Nov. 24

Admittedly, this game isn't big outside the Land of Lincoln. But plenty of people have bragging rights resting on this matchup. And they'll be able to use BOTH end zones this time.

| 1 Why do the White Sox keep changing their rotation? | Sometimes life just offers too many choices. Turkey. Roast beef. Oven roasted chicken. Help! | Honestly don't know. I only change mine once a week. | When guys switch positions, it improves their performance. Just ask any girl. | They got a hold of Coach Q's Random Line Generator. | Because why build a division lead if you can't blow it? |
| 2 If the White Sox win the AL Central... | ... I salute Chicago and am happy for my Sox fan friends but derive no pleasure personally. | If? There are no "ifs." Solid team, they'll be all right. And I'm a Cubs fan. | ... the CUBS still don't make it to the playoffs. | ... their inevitable failure has been put off another week. Rejoice. | ... Adam Dunn will celebrate with six home runs ... and six strikeouts. |
| 3 What can the NFL do to help replacement officials? | Glasses. Education. Resumes. | Threaten them with an eight-hour seminar taught by John Madden and Chris Berman. | Ask Foot Locker to keep their weekend jobs open for when the real ones return. | Train them? It's obvious they've had less training than your average McDonald's employee. | Oh man. Fire them. |
| 4 What should the winner of the Ryder Cup get? | Just so I'm clear: This is the polo match when the horses ride the jockeys, right? | An all-you-can-drink token for Medinah's lone bar, if there's any booze left. | Free rounds of "Funky Cold Medinahs"! | A cup they can, uh, ryde. I guess. I don't know. | Tickets to an interesting sporting event. |
| 5 If someone called you a "ballerina in a Giants uniform," how would you respond? | "I was just walking around in jeans and a T-shirt, but hey, it's your acid trip." | That was a misquote. He meant to say "baller in a Giants uniform." They're pals. | "So do these toe shoes make my butt look big?" | I'd put on a tutu and pirouette them in the balls. | I'd call them a cab. They are obviously drunk, as I've never been confused for a ballerina or a Giant. |

FANTASY FIX

Dan Richman

» @danrichmanfll
» redeyesports
» @tribune.com

Fantasy football is like anything else—it's about timing and luck. If you need a wide receiver or running back, now is the time to trade for one of these studs before they blow up. Let's look at their fantasy prospects going forward.

DAN RICHMAN HAS PLAYED FANTASY FOOTBALL FOR MORE THAN 15 YEARS AND HOSTED A SHOW ON THE SCORE (670) AND FOR YEARS UNDER THE MONIKER "SUPER FAN DAN."

Wes Welker

There is a theory that the New England receiver still is feeling the effects of the dropped pass in the Super Bowl and is mad about not getting a long-term deal. Whatever the reason, Welker was great against Baltimore in Week 3. In that game, he caught eight passes for 142 yards. Welker will get plenty of looks going forward due to his play and as well as Aaron Hernandez's injury, which will keep him out a few more weeks. Welker is particularly valuable in a points-per-reception league.

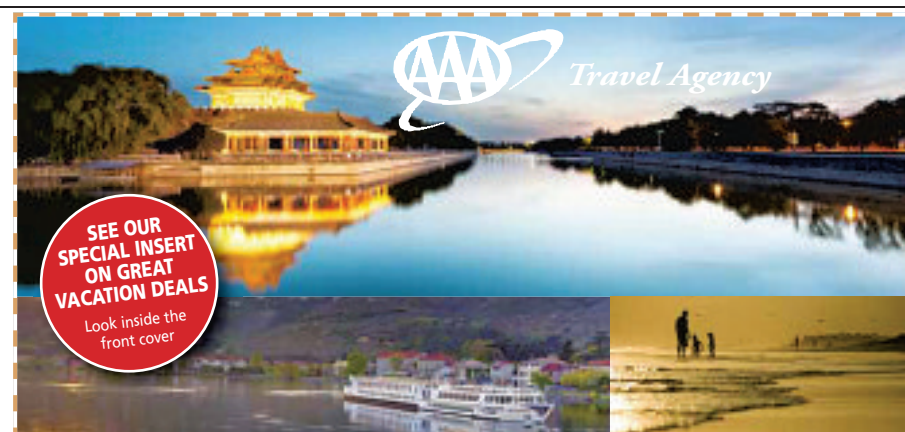

Mikel Leshoure

I am not big on going gaga after one game. However, Detroit's Leshoure could be an exception. The former Illini star was brilliant in his first NFL appearance, rushing for 100 yards and a touchdown. He will be the Lions' feature back going forward on a team that needs to establish a running game and could be the fantasy sleeper of the year.

Larry Fitzgerald

Arizona's Pro Bowl receiver was held in check his first two games. In Week 3, Fitz showed signs of life, catching nine balls for 114 yards and a score. Fitzgerald is developing a nice connection with quarterback Kevin Kolb, who appears to be the starter going forward. Plus, the next four games are easy for this big target: Miami, St. Louis, Buffalo and Minnesota.

Age of the iPhone

Apple's iPhone 5 is all the rage, but should you buy one?

Tribune Newspapers

Apple's iPhone 5 has become the fastest selling mobile phone of all time since its release last week, but does that mean you should buy one? It depends. The iPhone 5 is an improvement over its immediate predecessor, the iPhone 4S, with the new phone sporting a bigger screen and faster processor. But the iPhone brand, which revolutionized mobile technology when it debuted in 2007, is no longer the unchallenged technological leader.

Other smartphones have screens bigger than the iPhone 5's, with the same if not better picture quality. And although Apple fans will welcome the iPhone 5's 4G LTE connectivity, that's been available on phones using Google's Android mobile operating system for a couple of years.

That isn't to say that the iPhone 5 won't turn out to be a great smartphone—the others in the line have been sophisticated marvels. It's just that the iPhone 5 is not a huge leap forward, and the line now has significant competition.

Which circles back to the original question: Should you get one?

YOU SHOULD, IF ...

- » You already own an iPhone. In that case, you've probably bought a bunch of apps and other items that easily will transfer to the new device.
- » You own a bunch of Apple products. If there's one thing at which Apple is still the best, it's building an ecosystem. No other company has developed a technological environment that lets you jump from laptop to phone to tablet the way Apple has with its Mac, iPad and iPhone.

- » You want the best operating system. Google's Android has gotten a lot better recently, but Apple's iOS is still the best.
- » You want style points. The iPhone still is the most stylish phone.

YOU SHOULDN'T, IF ...

- » You want to save money. There are other phones available that are cheaper than the iPhone 5 with the same storage space and similar features. The HTC One X, one of the best Android models, is half the price of the iPhone 5.
- » You want the biggest screen. The iPhone 5's 4-inch looks very nice, but other phones have screens larger than 4 1/2 inches. Samsung's Galaxy Note phone has a screen that's more than 5 inches.

- » You want the most technologically advanced phone. The iPhone 5 sports Apple's latest mobile operating system, iOS 6, but other phones have longer-lasting batteries and more features, such as near-field communication, which allows devices to exchange data when in proximity.
- » You own a non-Apple tablet computer. If you have a tablet that uses the Android system—or if you plan to buy one of the upcoming Windows 8 tablets, such as Microsoft's Surface (left)—you should get a smartphone that runs the same operating system. That way, you can more easily share data.

If you have an iPhone to sell or are considering upgrading to iPhone 5, here are a few ways you can turn old hardware into cash. You could score up to $500 for some devices. TRIBUNE

Unlocking

Maximize value by allowing your device to be used on any iPhone carrier. AT&T is allowing current and former customers to request device unlocks online for up to five iPhones per year. Verizon offers a tutorial to unlock old iPhones only in certain instances, but now is selling unlocked iPhone 5. Sprint does not unlock phones, but there are YouTube tutorials for fearless do-it-yourselfers. Google away.

BY THE WAY

If you recently bought the iPhone 4S, you still may be able to return it. Some major companies—including AT&T, Target, Best Buy, Virgin Mobile and Apple itself—give you at least 30 days to return the phone, as long as it's undamaged, in its box and has all its accessories. Other companies, such as Verizon, Sprint and RadioShack, give you 14 days, while Wal-Mart will match the return policy of the carrier you chose for the phone.

Apple Recycling Program

Apple offers gift cards for old devices with value, and also will responsibly dispose of worthless ones for you. Visit apple.com/recycling to discover how.

Amazon.com

The online retailer offers three ways to sell your phone: Trade it in for an Amazon gift card, sell it to an individual or sell to professionals. You decide which option gets you the most cash.

GameStop

Get cash or store credit for iPhones, iPads and iPods. The retailer also sells the full spectrum of used Apple devices, including iPads for $299.

Actress Nina Dobrev is best known for playing Elena Gilbert on the hit CW show "The Vampire Diaries," but she garnered some much-deserved sartorial nods at the recent Toronto Film Festival. Dobrev made appearances alongside co-star Emma Watson to promote their new film, "The Perks Of Being A Wallflower."

The actress mixed things up when she stopped by the Lia Sophia IT Lounge Portrait Studio in a matching paint-spattered blouse and shorts ensemble from the Monique Lhuillier resort 2013 collection. She accessorized with a Lia Sophia Cirque ring and royal purple evening bag and finished the look with a pair of Manolo Blahnik for Monique Lhuillier ankle strap orange heels.

Dobrev's paint-spatter pattern is a fun print to integrate into your wardrobe. Get a similar look with these pieces.

This Sherlock is just 'Elementary'

SHOW PATROL

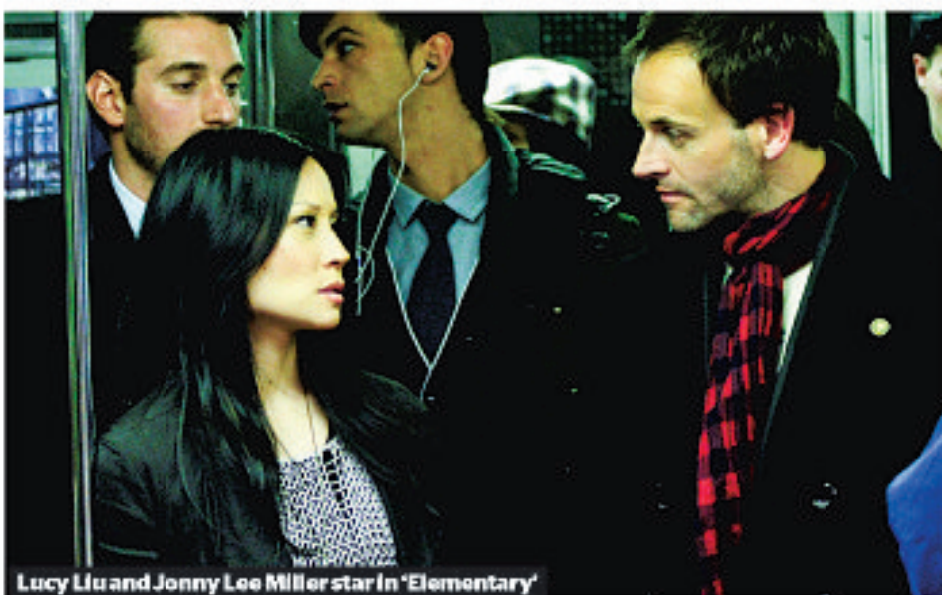

Curt Wagner

■ @showpatrol

Casual Sherlock Holmes fans may not be aware that the great detective often pumped a 7 percent solution of cocaine into his arm.

Rod Doherty makes that detail from Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's books the jumping-off point for his new crime drama, "Elementary." It could be an interesting choice, if CBS lets Doherty move beyond its pat crime-procedural format to more of a character drama that goes beyond murders that are not that baffling.

Jonny Lee Miller plays a modern-day Holmes in New York after he's just left rehab. He's an oddball, all fidgety but cocky and socially callous. His Dr. Watson, played by Lucy Liu, is a disgraced former surgeon hired by Holmes' wealthy father to act as Sherlock's sober companion. She'll live with him 24-7 for six months — certainly longer when CBS picks up the series for another season.

In the opener, after they meet Holmes returns to consulting on cases for Capt. Greg-son (Aidan Quinn) of the NYPD. Watson is at first stupefied not by Sherlock's brilliance, but by his bartiness. She eventually warms up to crime-solving, if not to Holmes himself. (Although that is likely to happen soon.)

Elementary

9 p.m. Thursday, CBS

For folks who are obsessed with PBS' far superior "Sherlock," "Elementary" will be quite disappointing. Miller is infinitely watchable, and I'm sure Liu will bring more to Watson if she's given the chance. (Making Watson a gal could be another compelling decision.)

My biggest problem with the opener is the crime they are asked to solve: It's rather, well, elementary. I figure pretty much any cop could have solved it.

CBS knows how to do the procedural. Heck, that's pretty much all the network airs. And it works. So I have little doubt "Elementary" will succeed. But if the network wants to keep Holmes purists happy, it'll need to make future cases worthier of the sleuth's attention.

OTHER THURSDAY PREMIERES:

"The Big Bang Theory," 7 p.m. CBS; "Two and a Half Men," 7:30 p.m. CBS; "Person of Interest," 8 p.m. CBS; "Grey's Anatomy," 8 p.m. ABC; "Scandal," 9 p.m. ABC

Scott Speedman and Andre Braugher star in 'Last Resort'

'Last Resort' thrills

SHOW PATROL

Curt Wagner

A lot of viewers aren't going to like "Last Resort," ABC's new military drama, dismissing it for its crazy premise, its characters' speechifying and its multiple subplots. It's the season's riskiest new series, but also one of the best.

My biggest problem with the thrilling pilot is that it ended too quickly. It was packed with enough explosive stuff for a two-hour premiere event. Creators Shawn Ryan and Karl Gajdusek masterfully balance the various subplots and character beats while maintaining an electrifying forward momentum.

As the nuclear sub USS Colorado passes the equator, Capt. Marcus Chaplin (Andre Braugher) and his executive officer, Sam Kendal (Scott Speedman), are ordered to fire some of their 18 onboard nukes at Pakistan. They refuse because of the shady way the command was sent. Obviously, something scary and dangerous is happening in Washington and our heroes are going to get to the bottom of the mystery—or the ocean.

Last Resort
7 p.m. Thursday, ABC

Chaplin takes his sub and its 150 crew members, plus a few secretive Special Forces soldiers plucked from the ocean, to an island where he makes a stand: In a worldwide address, he warns of a White House coup and threatens to launch his nukes if the island stronghold is attacked.

No one gives an ultimatum like Andre Braugher. He's riveting as Chaplin, a man who you're not sure is the moral center of the story, or a career sailor finally pushed to his absolute limit.

I admit that "Last Resort" tells a far-fetched tale, but I choose to go with it. Most viewers who do so will enjoy this weekly trip to TV's latest island paradise.

Fried by night

Bye-bye bikini season—
Fall menus offer up these 6 golden wonders

By Samantha Nelson

FOR REDEYE

The end of beach season and shortening days are a definite bummer, but the start of fall does have some particularly tasty advantages. For one, now that you've got a good excuse to ditch the sundresses and shorts in favor of some oh-so-concealing layers, you can indulge in all the fried food fun you avoided this summer. Satisfy those pent-up cravings with these comforting fried dishes off six of the city's newest menus. When the temperatures really start to drop, you'll be thankful to have a little extra insulation.

Fried olive basket at The Drinkingbird

2201 N. Clybourn Ave. 773-472-9920

Price: $6

The retro Lincoln Park lounge uses its big green olives for more than just martinis. These red pepper-stuffed beauties are rolled in panko bread crumbs, deep-fried and served with blue cheese dipping sauce. Fifteen olives come to one appetizer order, so be prepared to share.

Dragon egg at Dragon Ranch Moonshine & BBQ

441 N. Clark St. 312-955-1900 Price: $12

The Asian-influenced River North spot from the team behind Rocket shows that eggs don't have to be fried in a skillet. This dish stars a soft-poached duck egg wrapped in spicy sausage and then crusted with panko bread crumbs before a dip in the deep fryer. It's served atop greens tossed in Chinese mustard vinaigrette, so you can pretend it's at least a little healthy.

Fried pickles at Fatpour Tap Works

2005 W. Division St. 773-698-8940

Price: $7

This new Ukrainian Village sports bar thinly slices six pickle spears, then beer-batters and fries them until they're slightly crispy. They're served with a signature sauce—a blend of horseradish, spicy brown mustard, garlic, crushed red pepper and still more pickle.

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

Fried green tomatoes at Carriage House

1700 W. Division St. 773-384-9700

Price: $8

The new Wicker Park restaurant from the team behind The Bedford creates a medley of Southern flavors on one plate with two fried pieces of half-inch-thick cornmeal-crusted tomatoes served with hot sauce vinaigrette, pickled shrimp, tomato creme fraiche and creamed red peas.

Fried cheese for grown-ups at Bar Toma

110 E. Pearson St. 312-266-3110

Price: $6

This Gold Coast pizzeria's playfully named take on a bar-food favorite, mozzarella sticks, starts with pepperoni that's ground into a sausage-like consistency. After it's blended with Calabrian chilis and smoked garlic, the sausage is sandwiched between two pieces of Wisconsin mozzarella, coated in bread crumbs and fried until it's crispy on the outside and melty inside. So as not to overpower the taste of the meat, you won't find any marinara sauce for dipping on this plate.

Fried cheese curds at Maid-Rite

2429 N. Lincoln Ave. 773-687-9250

Price: $4.99

If you're craving a fast fix for fried food, the cooks at this Iowa-based diner's Lincoln Park location, the first in Chicago, can whip up an order of these battered white cheddar bites in three minutes. Enjoy them with a side of marinara or buttermilk-asiago sauce.

Pouch cocktails create instant party

Tribune Newspapers

Cocktails in a pouch have bagged a thirsty audience.

These single-serving pouches offer choices from margaritas and pina coladas to fruit-flavored daiquiris and sangria. Fuss-free, they're marketed on shelves near beer in supermarkets and drugstores for the suggested retail price of $1.99. An unopened 10-ounce pouch has a shelf life of one year.

With the pouches, you don't need a gaggle of friends for an instant party. Just reach in the freezer, snip off an end of the foil-lined pouch and pour. No blender, ice or inventory of bartender ingredients is required.

Daily's Cocktails, a brand by American Beverage Corp., introduced a pouch line (now with seven flavors) in 2005. This month the company added two new autumn flavors, said Lisa Coker, chief marketing officer. Hard cider and spiced sangria can be enjoyed frozen, chilled or warm.

Seagram's introduced four flavors in its Escapes line this year. Two more flavors will be added in 2013, said Jennifer McCauley, brand manager.

What drives their popularity? Price, convenience and America's penchant for sweet drinks, said Dale DeGroff, a New York-based author and authority on cocktail beverages. "We grew up on soda pop. Sweet drinks. These products are a short hop away from a Slurpee. But they're not authentic cocktails. They don't contain any spirits."

Information on the labels supports this. Tequila and rum are not used, respectively, in the margaritas, pina coladas and daiquiris. The products are identified as flavored wine products or flavored malt beverages. The first three ingredients, for example, in Daily's margarita are water, high fructose corn syrup and wine.

All brands contain a mere 5 percent alcohol by volume. Because they lack spirits and contain low alcohol per volume, they can be sold in most places where beer and wine are sold.

▲ Daily's margarita and Parrot Bay's pina colada pre-mixed frozen cocktails.

BILL HOGAN/TRIBUNE

Convenience and fun sell, but there's a trade-off in taste, Victor Baheza said.

"Who can afford to make an authentic margarita with quality tequila, triple sec and fresh lime juice for $1.99?" said the manager and beverage director for Zocalo, a Mexican restaurant in Chicago. "You get what you pay for."

The No. 19 Betel leaf-wrapped beef sausage banh mi sandwich from Nhu Lan. KEVIN PANG/TRIBUNE

EAT THIS!

Banh mi

$5.50 or under at Nhu Lan

The recent expansions of Chicago's two best banh mi shops—Ba Le and Nhu Lan Saigon Subs—is confirmation that the Vietnamese sandwich has achieved critical mass.

A bit of history: The baguette was introduced to Vietnam in the 19th century during its French colonial days. European and Southeast Asian ingredients merged into a sandwich with liver pate, pickled daikon radish, carrots and cilantro.

Chicago's banh mi scene is dominated by the two aforementioned shops. But as much love as we have for Ba Le, Nhu Lan remains one notch above. The reason is its terrific bread—brush-off-your-shirt flaky crust, sponge-soft interior, never more than a few hours fresh from the in-house oven. Our two favorites are the No. 5 pork belly and No. 10 lemongrass tofu. (Pictured here is the No. 19 Betel leaf-wrapped beef sausage known as bo la lot.)

WHERE: Nhu Lan has two locations at 2612 W. Lawrence Ave, 773-878-9898, and 602 W. Belmont Ave, 773-857-6868.

POTTER, MORE

We hear J.K. Rowling has an adult novel coming out ...

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

J.K. Rowling might finally step out of Harry Potter's shadow. The scribe, whose estimated net worth was $1 billion in 2011 (she's much richer than Queen Elizabeth), is set to release her first adult novel, "The Casual Vacancy," on Thursday. Preorders for the book—which according to reports contains the word "vagina" (gasp)—already have it ranked at No. 3 on the Amazon best-seller list. But are we really ready to move on from the Potter world? Here's a few lingering questions for Rowling, five years after Harry finally vanquished Voldemort. And if that was a spoiler, you've got to be kidding us. DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

What was Crookshanks the cat's story before Hermione bought him?

Does the sorting hat smell bad after sitting on child wizards' heads for centuries, or is it self-cleaning?

Did Bellatrix Lestrange and Voldemort ever hook up, and if they did, was she all clingy about it when he didn't send her an owl afterward?

How did you pick which Weasley to kill off? Even we can't tell Fred and George's personalities apart.

Was Luna Lovegood a bridesmaid at Harry and Ginny's wedding?

Why did you let the film-makers add that stupid scene to the movie where the Weasleys' house gets burned down?

Where can we get that hair cream that Hermione used at the Yule Ball?

Is wizard sex way crazier than Muggle sex?

How did Hagrid's human father and giantess mother fall in love?

Yes, they're dating

Cassie (above, from left) and Sean "Diddy" Combs have ended the denials that they are a couple. "Love him" was the caption of an Instagram photo Cassie posted of Diddy. "I'm a very lucky man. #Knowthat," Combs tweeted with a photo of Cassie. Awww!

4 The number of additional episodes TLC has ordered for its reality hit "Here Comes Honey Boo Boo." The network ordered an extra regular episode, plus three HOLLADay specials to air at Halloween, Thanksgiving and Christmas. The show averaged 2.3 million viewers in its first season, which ended its first half Wednesday.

2014 That's when Neil Patrick Harris will release his memoir, thr.com reports. The book has not yet been titled, but we have a few suggestions to help NPH get his creative juices going.

- » "Legen ... (Wait for it: The Life and Times of NPH) ... dary"
- » "Awesompants"
- » "How Harold and Kumar Saved My Career"
- » "Doogie Howser and the Goblet of Fire"

Does Chicago have another Jennifer Hudson for the coming season of "American Idol"? It's looking good, judging by the reaction from the show's judges, who are in town for Season 12 call-back auditions. "I was literally in tears today,"

Mariah Carey said Wednesday at a news conference at Adler Planetarium. "I think it's been a pretty emotional couple of days." Added Randy Jackson: "Some great stories, some great voices, very inspiring people. It's really been quite an 'Idol' sort of time here in Chicago."

"I always said, 'I want my ring like you—big! The bigger the better!'"

—JWoww, to InTouch magazine, on her engagement to 6-foot-4 Roger Mathews. Judging from the photos of the happy couple, she got her wish.

Rebellious Rebel

That woman who says she's not Rebel Wilson? That still could be the Australian star, who admitted to the Los Angeles Times that she sometimes lies to fans about her identity. "They're like, 'Are you that girl who is in 'Bridesmaids?'" And I'm like, 'No.' Sometimes I can be convincing that it's not me," she said. How sneaky!
